What Kind of Tater Are You?

A simple activity...Potatoes are the theme! You can plan your program or devotional around all kinds of tater personalities:

Agie Tater– always stirring up trouble

Hezzie Tater– never gets around to doing anything

Dick Tater– likes to give orders, but don't want to soil there own hands

Comment Tater– not willing to help but are quick to criticize

Speck Tater– content to sit on the sidelines & not participate in any ministry

Sweet Tater– always willing to help, brings sunshine to lives of others, displays fruit of the Spirit.

The invitations can have pictures of different kinds of potatoes on them such as potato chips, French fries, baked potatoes, hash browns, sweet potatoes, etc. Ladies can each bring copies of there favorite potato recipes to share.

An icebreaker idea is to play “Hot Potato.” Ideal refreshments are all things potato including.. potato chips and dip, potato skins, sweet potato cheesecake squares, and sweet potato bread.

Potato scrubbers and potato peelers work well as prizes.

At the end of evening, give everyone a small container of Pringles and plenty of recipes to take home.

Potato Night

I did a Potato night with our ladies once, and we had a contest with the different tables— they had to dress their potatoes (like a fashion show). THAT WAS HILARIOUS!!!!

I gave them a ziploc bag of fabric scraps, cotton balls, yarn, pins and scissors and they had to come up with clothes for these big baking potatoes.

Then we had a mini potato fashion show.

We also did a Potato Chip tasting. We had about 6 different types of chips sitting out and they had to taste them and write down what they thought they were.

If anyone ever does this, put the spicy chips at the end of the line as it affects the taste of the other chips.

There was a devotion about being a part of the body of Christ, and I used Mr. Potato Head to illustrate what happens when we aren't fulfilling our God-designed role in the church body.

You end up with four ears or three feet or whatever. Simple, but kind of funny, too.

Good memories!!! I might have to do this again with my current ladies.
